The Cornwall Center for Metropolitan Studies and the Department of Urban Education at Rutgers University Newark invite applications for a full-time, tenured position at the associate or full professor level, to begin July, 2020, or as negotiated.

The Department and the Center are seeking an equity-focused scholar with strong methodological skills and intellectual vision who can provide leadership in our partnerships with area public schools. We are looking for someone who is committed to research that is socially impactful and who is comfortable working in diverse urban contexts with multiple stakeholders and constituencies. A successful candidate sees the collaborative partnership of Urban Education and the Cornwall Center as critical to developing the next generation of scholars and scholarship in urban studies, and wishes to craft additional cross-disciplinary opportunities at an urban anchor institution that is committed to publicly-engaged scholarship.

Responsibilities: The successful candidate will be responsible for: undergraduate teaching in the Department of Urban Education, developing and leading research projects at the Cornwall Center, and active engagement and service in both the Department and the Center, including grant writing.

Qualifications: A doctorate in education, sociology or a related field; successful teaching record; minimum of 5 years successful leadership or managerial role in urban research; strong publishing record and clear research agenda; demonstrated body of work suitable for tenure at a research university; mixed methods background highly desirable but strong quantitative skills essential, including work with large datasets and program evaluation. Experience with research–practice partnerships and/or continuous improvement research highly desirable. Must be comfortable working with community partners in all phases of the research process.

Context: Rutgers University – Newark, one of the country's most diverse campuses, aims to be a national leader in 21st century higher education through a commitment to the values of educating a diverse citizenry, producing high impact scholarship, engaging in our community as an anchor institution, and drawing the connection between local and global, for the improvement of the economic and social well-being of society as a whole. We are a vibrant university situated on 38 beautifully landscaped acres in the heart of the downtown of NJ’s largest city and 15 miles away from NYC.

The Joseph C. Cornwall Center for Metropolitan Studies is a research and demonstration center focusing on the challenges and opportunities confronting New Jersey's metropolitan areas. The Center sponsors research projects, publications, conferences, symposia, seminars, workshops, public forums, and incubates projects translating research into practice.

The Department of Urban Education at Rutgers University offers both undergraduate and graduate programs, focusing on schooling in urban environments. Our fundamental premise is that public schools are crucial to the cultivation of creative, productive, and politically involved individuals committed to a just and democratic society. The Department is dedicated to the preparation and professional development of future and current teachers, administrators, and scholars who contribute to the improvement of urban education through their teaching, community involvement, leadership, and research.

Required Documents
1. Cover Letter
2. Curriculum Vitae
3. Research Statement
4. Teaching Philosophy
5. Names and Contact Information for 3 references.

Please apply online at: https://jobs.rutgers.edu/postings/108609