Organization
Shakespeare Theatre Company (STC) reinvents the classics, audaciously. Based in Washington D.C., STC strives to create joy, surprise, illumination, and empathy. With Shakespeare as its house dramatist, STC believes that storytelling changes lives.

Founded in 1985 by Michael Kahn, STC became famous for its exhilarating and intellectually rigorous work. Simon Godwin, Associate Director at the Royal National Theatre (UK) and former Associate Director of London’s Royal Court Theatre and Bristol Old Vic, became its second Artistic Director in 2019. Godwin has since propelled STC into the headlines. His recent direction of King Lear, starring Patrick Page in the title role, was received with wild critical acclaim and sold out after three extensions; his 2020 film of Romeo & Juliet, with Jessie Buckley and Josh O’Connor, was hailed by the New York Times as “cut in half and twice as good”.

Alongside works by Shakespeare, STC has recently hosted sold-out presentations of The Jungle and Here There Are Blueberries and announced a strong 2023/2024 season, including co-productions of Evita, Macbeth (starring the incomparable Ralph Fiennes), and a new production of The Lehman Trilogy. Godwin has renewed his contract as Artistic Director through 2028 and is seeking a partner to help grow this internationally relevant, classical theater with sky high ambitions.

STC produces across two stages in the Penn Quarter neighborhood. The Klein Theatre is housed in a historic building with a seating capacity of 450, offering an intimate atmosphere and a close connection between the performers and audience. The 775-seat Sidney Harman Hall, with its epic stage, allows for elaborate sets and grand productions. STC’s offices and costume shop are located on Capitol Hill, and its scene and prop shop are in Brookland, near Catholic University. Currently, with support from the District of Columbia, the Cafritz Foundation, and Erkiletian Development, STC is finalizing its plans for a mixed-use real estate project called The Bard, which explores additional alternatives for administrative, production, rehearsal space, and artist housing.

STC complements and supports its mainstage productions with a commitment to education, learning, and community engagement. Through its extensive educational programs, including workshops, residencies, in-classroom teaching artists, and matinee performances, the company makes Shakespeare accessible and relevant to students and young audiences. STC offers classes and camps for all ages and is expanding on both the content and the distribution of the successful on-line learning programs it developed through the pandemic. The STC Academy, a joint venture between STC and George Washington University, offers participants a transformative one-year MFA in Classical Acting, where they gain a deep understanding of Shakespeare’s plays and their relevance to contemporary society. Students at the STC Academy understudy STC main stage productions.

STC is committed to building an inclusive organization that reflects the diversity of its community. Approximately half of its staff are members of the company’s EDI committee, and they participate in monthly open forum discussions where new EDI and anti-racist policies are developed. These policies aim to create a safe, inclusive, and supportive atmosphere. More information on STC’s EDI initiatives and anti-racism action plan can be viewed at: http://www.shakespearetheatre.org/about/equity-diversity-inclusion/.

STC is governed by a 32-member board of directors, led since 2022 by Chair Anita Antenucci. The staff includes 95 full time employees and over 200 part time and seasonal employees. STC is financially stable, experiencing year-over-year growth in subscriptions and other earned revenue streams, and has maintained meaningful cash reserves and capacity to service its outside debt. For the fiscal year ending 2022, the total operating revenue was $13.6 million, with approximately $6.5 million from contributions and grants and the remaining $7.1 million from ticket sales, education programs, investments, and other earned income. Expenses were $14.4 million. For the fiscal year 2023, annual revenues are projected to be $16.2 million and annual expenses are projected to be $16.4 million, including investments in two new positions with a focus on longer term contributed and earned revenue growth.
Community
Washington D.C. is the nation’s capital and center of political culture. A global city with more than 190 embassies, it is also the headquarters of the World Bank and home to many nonprofit organizations. D.C.’s reputation as a welcoming city is evident in the diversity of its communities and the progressive local policies and services that support the quality of life and inclusive participation of its 670,000 residents. The downtown arts community draws from a Greater Washington D.C. population of roughly 5.5 million and a thriving technology industry, recently boosted by the establishment of Amazon’s HQ2 and supported throughout economic cycles by the substantial private sector support to the Federal government.

Washington D.C. is robustly supported by actively engaged individual artists, locally significant arts organizations, and cultural institutions of national and world-wide repute. Free and family-friendly programming is available year-round at the 17 Smithsonian Museums and the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, ensuring access for all to the transformational power of the arts. STC is one of several acclaimed theatres in Washington D.C., alongside Arena Stage, Woolly Mammoth, the National Theatre, Ford’s Theatre, and GALA Hispanic Theatre, which produce world-class shows that range from new and experimental works to Broadway-bound musicals.

The demographic makeup of the city is approximately 46.2% White, 45% African American, 11.7% Latinx or Hispanic, 4.7% Asian, and 13.5% foreign-born residents.

Position Summary
Reporting to the board of directors as a co-leader alongside the Artistic Director, the Executive Director will be responsible for the business operations of the organization, and the leader of its financial and strategic planning for its evolving business model. This will include overseeing all aspects of STC’s administrative operations, including financial management, labor relations, facilities management and construction, community engagement, and contributed and earned revenue streams. Serving as an engaging community ambassador, they will develop influential connections throughout Washington D.C., as well as nationally and internationally. The Executive Director will build authentic relationships with staff at all organizational levels, as well as with the board, artists, and donors, by being a visible presence in the office and community. A fearless champion of EDI, they will be committed to making STC inclusive for people of all backgrounds and create an organizational culture of respect, teamwork, and accountability.

Role and Responsibilities

Strategic Leadership and Financial Oversight
- Collaborate as a dedicated partner to the Artistic Director, jointly advancing the theater’s programming and long-term strategic direction, artistic vision, and organizational goals.
- Demonstrate exceptional fiscal and business acumen, overseeing budgets, controlling expenditures, and developing short- and long-term forecasts, ensuring STC operates at the highest level of financial accountability.
- Monitor and report financial performance to the board, providing clear financial analysis and scenario plans to underpin data-driven financial decisions that support sustainability and growth.
- Champion and implement organizational EDI and anti-racism initiatives in all aspects of artistic and administrative decisions.
- Identify potential artistic collaborators, domestically and internationally, partnering with the Artistic Director to curate an exciting and diverse season in alignment with the organization’s mission.

Organizational Excellence and Board Governance
- Foster a healthy and cohesive working culture that removes silos and supports creative and collaborative work while holding departments accountable to their financial and other goals.
- Engage regularly with all staff, addressing complex issues honestly, directly, and without fear of conflict, including issues around pay equity, EDI, and anti-racism.
- Guide the marketing department to ensure imaginative communication and creative ticket pricing strategies.
- Oversee the management of STC’s two theaters, guiding building renovations when necessary, establishing innovative uses of the spaces, increasing rental opportunities, and executing the real estate project, The Bard.
- Assist in growing, diversifying, and supporting the board of directors, leveraging their expertise, networks, and resources to support the organization’s mission and goals.
- Provide regular updates, reports, and strategic guidance to the board, while ensuring the organization operates in accordance with its legal, governance, and compliance requirements.

External Relations and Revenue Enhancement
- Serve as a visible community leader and public spokesperson, fostering strong relationships with all audiences including funders and potential supporters, politicians, government officials, other arts organizations and businesses, raising STC’s profile and advocating for the importance of the arts.
- Support ongoing labor relations and negotiate contracts with unions, including Actors’ Equity Association, Stage Directors and Choreographers Society, United Scenic Artists, League of Resident Theaters, American Federation of Musicians, and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.
- Prioritize the work of the learning department, increasing staff and broadening educational and community programs, camps, classes, and on-line learning offerings to generate additional earned revenue.
- Support new audience engagement initiatives designed to expand the theater’s reach and deepen the experience of new and existing theatergoers.
- Actively engage in fundraising efforts, supporting the development department to increase both annual giving and strategic contributed revenue through comprehensive fundraising campaigns and galas, and cultivating relationships with individual donors, corporations, foundations, and other funders.
- Participate in industry conferences and theater organizations to represent STC, staying informed of and offering leadership on current trends and best practices.

Traits and Characteristics
The Executive Director will be a visionary and strategic leader and manager, with a collaborative approach to establishing goals and solving problems. As a business savvy professional, they will possess financial and business management skills to envision alternative business models and financing models for STC, its facilities, and its organizational objectives. A clear and transparent communicator with an approachable demeanor, they will be people-centered, responsive to the needs of others, and foster close working relationships. As a confident networker, the Executive Director will be adept at cultivating and maintaining a wide range of partnerships that bring value to the organization.
